“I am grateful for being loved. It feels very good to know I am home and never have to worry about being abandoned again. I have left those days behind me. I walk freely now into seeing beauty all around me. I love the colors of the trees. I love a blue sky. I cherish standing outside in the sun. But I also like the comfort of my stall. I love having my other horse friends in the barn. We are a family. We all share a gratitude for being together. Each of us is different and we respect each other’s differences. That is what makes it all so good. I’ve learned a lot from listening to the donkeys and ducks and chickens. And of course our own very wise goose too! There is so much around us to inspire our hearts. We simply need to share with one another to appreciate each being with gratitude. I will never lose sight of that again.”
